Gloucester-based concrete company builds a new plant in Hampton

Dec. 2, 2013 - Rappahannock Concrete Corp. of Gloucester, which also has plants in Newport News, Saluda, New Kent, and White Stone, is building a new concrete plant at the Copeland Industrial Park in Hampton.

Scott Finney, president of Rappahannock Concrete, said the company decided to build in Hampton because it's a strategic location for their growth. Finney said the new plant, which will have 10-15 employees, will help Rappahannock serve customers in the Middle Peninsula.

Rappahannock Concrete was founded in 1961 by John L. Finney, Scott Finney's father, and has been in Gloucester since 1963. In addition to the ready-mix concrete business, Rappahannock also has a full-service masonry division. Together, they serve customers on the Northern Neck, Middle Peninsula, Peninsula and surrounding areas.

Hampton's Director of Economic Development, Leonard Sledge, said: "Rappahannock Concrete chose a great Hampton location in the Copeland Industrial Park to expand their business and serve all of Hampton Roads. The company is making a significant investment to build their plant and create jobs in the city. The City of Hampton is thankful to have Rappahannock Concrete as part of our dynamic business community."

Located minutes from interstates 64 and 664, Copeland Industrial Park sits on the border of Hampton and Newport News and is home to a host of businesses.
